Newsletter Guardant Solutions News Almost Half Of Cancer Drug Approvals Have Failed To Provide Health Benefits Certain cancer drugs are showing limited promise and are causing terrible side effects, says a new analysis. WASHINGTON, DC - More than half of recent cancer drugs that have been approved by the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) have not shown significant improvements in patients' lives, research shows. According to a study published in the Journal of Clinical Oncology, there have been 180 new cancer drug approvals since 2009, out of which almost 60 per cent were failures and showed no significant benefits over current treatments. "Today, more than half of the new cancer drugs that have been approved in the last seven years failed to show any significant health benefits in patients, and some of these drugs may have created problems that are even worse than the cancers they claimed to be treating," said study author Benjamin Sommers from
