This recovery was consistent with changes in renal function at the initial presentation in the acute phase of cardiorenal syndrome. These findings suggest that the removal of the occlusive or embolic event leading to ischemic HF requires a time course of both 1 month (renal function) and 3 months (LV function), regardless of the initial presentation. In the present study, baseline proteinuria was not predictive of the development of renal dysfunction after the removal of FLA. However, in the CLARITY-AHF substudy, baseline proteinuria was associated with development of renal dysfunction after the removal of the FLA.12{ref-type="ref"} Although in the present study, the direct association of baseline proteinuria and the development of renal dysfunction cannot be determined, we did not find that baseline proteinuria was associated with an improvement in renal function.
